

The Loom: Credits for Redesigned Year 2

Redesigned Year 2 has been written in such a way as to take more of the guess-work out of assigning high school credits. The following credits are based upon using Tapestry Year 2 as it has been written, using the assignments on the “primary resources” Reading Assignment Charts. Always consult your umbrella school or state laws regarding your specific requirements. Remember that the issue is not just high school graduation, but college entrance. You will want to plan accordingly.

WRITING	Composition I, II, III, or IV	½	If the student is pursuing the English credit above, do not give a separate Writing credit in addition to the English credit.
GEOGRAPHY	World Geography	¼	If the student is pursuing the history credit above, do not give a separate Geography credit.
FINE ARTS	History of Fine Arts I	¼	If the student does additional hands-on projects, culled from the Dialectic assignments, ½ credit could be given.

*Students in their senior year have the option of completing a Classical Comparison Paper. The Classical Comparison paper replaces Personal Response, Literary Analysis, and Literary Comparison papers in the year in which the student completes it. In that year the student is not required to write any of those papers for an English, Honors English, Literature, or Honors Literature credit.

Keep in mind that all transcripts focus on academic achievement. Resist the temptation to find a way to give your child credit for a vast variety of extra-curricular activities. For instance, don't give "Home Economics" credits to girls who do household chores, babysit, and fold the laundry. Colleges are looking at transcripts to see what academic work the student has done. Almost without exception, colleges provide an extra page that allows you to give glowing reports of all the community, church, club, and other activities. Colleges want to see this page filled up! They want well-rounded students. But, they don't consider these activities to be academic achievements; these are considered extracurricular, and therefore don't belong on a transcript, except under that heading.

You must decide (with your student, if possible) how many high school credits he plans to work for this year. Explain the time commitment involved, and show him how to fill out his planner. You may also want to consider a "Credit Contract." (See model course contract in The Loom.)
